About the Seminar

Teaching is a very complex profession and formative in nature. Being a teacher is not only a matter of getting access to a certain body of knowledge and acquiring adequate skills in a specific subject. Becoming a teacher is transformational in nature. It is, first and foremost, about developing one's own personal and professional identity. Such an identity can be obtained and enriched by interdisciplinary approach. Interdisciplinary approach has developed in recent years which mean the use of methods of one discipline to another. Interdisciplinarity is one of the new solutions of theoretical and practical problems of education. It includes collaboration between teachers of various disciplines such as medical, nursing, engineering, law and education, or even integration of disciplines and methods that specialists use in different fields. This leads to the creation of common ground and areas of interface between disciplines, and contributes to the creation of interdisciplinarity and helps in professional development of teachers. This seminar will provide a platform for teachers working in various discipline to come together to share their view, pedagogies, concerns and to develop models and strategies for their professional development.
